The Hadley School for the Blind

2009 Annual Report

Growing Literacy

Celebrating nearly a century of teaching braille
As the sun began to set on a summer evening, Hadley had the pleasure of dedicating the new Marylou Hayford Sensory Garden. Named in memory of Marylou Hayford, a Hadley Woman’s Board member and active member of the Garden Guild of Winnetka, the space was designed to provide a multisensory experience. With vibrant colors, diverse textures, a wide array of fragrances, the calming sounds of two bubbling fountains, evening lighting and wheelchair access, the garden provides a place for all to enjoy.

The dedication brought together members of the Hayford family from as far away as Florida, including Marylou’s husband Warren, whose generous contribution made the garden possible. Friends, colleagues and Hadley staff also celebrated Marylou’s involvement with Hadley and her love of gardening.

We look forward to having the community, guests and Hadley faculty and staff enjoy the beauty and solace it provides for many years to come.
Dear Friends,

2009 marks the Bicentennial of Louis Braille, so it is only fitting that we dedicate this year’s annual report to the role that Hadley has assumed as the world’s largest educator of braille.

It has been nearly 90 years since William A. Hadley, encouraged by his friend and colleague, Dr. E.V.L Brown, began teaching “braille by mail” and, to this day, braille remains Hadley’s most popular area of study. With 13 different courses and 14 instructors dedicated to teaching this critical skill to visually impaired students and, more recently, to sighted family members and professionals, Hadley continues to be a leader in its field. As interest in braille continues to grow, Hadley is meeting the need by seeking ways to expand its offerings. For example, we are applying for grant funding to develop a course on braille music.

In this annual report, we share our activities and accomplishments from the past year, including how Hadley celebrated Louis Braille’s 200th birthday and raised awareness about our educational programs in the process. Whether it was promoting the Louis Braille Bicentennial Traveling Exhibit this past summer, or hosting C. Michael Mellor, author of Louis Braille: A Touch of Genius, or throwing a successful Bastille Day garden party to celebrate Louis Braille’s birthday, Hadley opened its doors to the community and reminded the public about the importance of braille and the school’s ongoing commitment to literacy and lifelong learning.

We are proud to be the largest provider of distance education for individuals who are blind or visually impaired, their family members and blindness professionals. Thank you for helping us advance our mission. With your support, we can ensure that braille instruction continues to thrive at Hadley and that all the courses we offer impact the lives of our students in profound ways, now and in the future.

Warmest regards,

Charles E. Young
President

The Legacy of Louis Braille

If William Hadley were alive today, he would be thrilled that the school bearing his name is celebrating the contributions of Louis Braille, whose 200th birthday was commemorated this year.

As the world’s largest educator of braille and the largest provider of distance education for people who are blind or visually impaired, the Hadley School has stayed true to its mission of promoting literacy, independence and lifelong learning since its founding in 1920.

The school has come a long way since introducing the concept of “braille by mail.” Today, Hadley boasts over 100 courses, one-third of which are online, dozens of online seminars and a comprehensive curriculum of braille courses focused on teaching uncontracted and contracted formats to both tactile learners and sighted individuals, including families and professionals in the field.

For years, Hadley has taught braille to tens of thousands of people who are blind around the globe. Despite the perception that the use of braille is in decline due to new technologies, Hadley’s braille enrollments are stronger than ever. Last year, there were more than 4,300 students in braille reading and writing courses alone (combined sighted and blind students). This should not be surprising given that individuals who are proficient in braille tend to have higher levels of education and better employment opportunities.

The Hadley School has also advanced the use of braille in a number of ways. It was one of the first institutions to use the Thermoform Duplicator, which copies braille from paper to a Brailon (a sheet of durable plastic) and one of the first schools in the country to use a computer-driven, high-speed braille printer.

A longtime leader in the braille production field, Hadley produces more than 90,000 braille pages each year, supplementing mass brailing prepared offsite. For a modest fee, Hadley also provides braille transcription services in accordance with Braille Authority of North America standards and prepared by transcribers certified by the National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped. Approximately 80 percent of Hadley’s courses are offered in braille (as well as in large print, audio and online).

If Louis Braille were alive today, he would not only be celebrating his Bicentennial, but also the vision and leadership of William Hadley.
January 4, 2009 marked the 200th birthday of Louis Braille, who was born in Coupvray, France and lost his sight as a child after an accident in his father’s harness shop. After years of diligent study at a school for the blind in Paris, Monsieur Braille developed the touch system of raised dots that would later bear his name.

This summer, Hadley hosted the Louis Braille Bicentennial Traveling Exhibit created by National Braille Press. The exhibit, in both print and braille, illustrates the life of Louis Braille and the evolution of braille. Hadley planned several events around this colorful and informative exhibit and invited the community to explore the life of this exemplary Frenchman.

On June 30, Hadley’s Woman’s Board held a Friends and Family Night, inviting guests to tour the school and view the exhibit. On July 13, Hadley partnered with the French Institute of the North Shore to host a Bastille Day and Louis Braille Birthday Celebration in the school’s new sensory garden. More than 80 people enjoyed French wine, food and live music. On July 14, Hadley collaborated with The Book Stall at Chestnut Court for a book signing by C. Michael Mellor, author of Louis Braille: A Touch of Genius.

Louis Braille has enabled people who are blind or visually impaired throughout the world to be truly literate. We look forward to celebrating his contributions for years to come.

1) Maria Kurt, director of the French Institute of the North Shore and Hadley President Chuck Young extend a warm welcome to guests gathered in The Marylou Hayford Sensory Garden at The Hadley School for the Blind.
2) Guests mingle in the garden.
3) The Louis Braille Bicentennial Traveling Exhibit was on display during July.
Urban Miyares, a blinded Vietnam veteran and founder of the Disabled Businesspersons Association (DBA), is the recipient of The Hadley School for the Blind’s 2009 President’s Award for his service to the blindness community.

An entrepreneur for more than 40 years and one of the nation’s leading authorities on self-employment for people with disabilities, Mr. Miyares helps people maximize their potential in the business world.

Since 1985, the DBA, an international nonprofit organization, has helped more than 12,000 people with disabilities develop and implement successful business practices. Mr. Miyares also provides business information, assistance and networking opportunities through his involvement with the Veterans Business Resource Center.

“Urban is a beacon in the blindness community,” says Hadley President Chuck Young. “The employment rate among people with visual impairments is dismal, and Urban’s example and assistance to those who need it is invaluable.”

In 2009, Mr. Miyares and Chuck Young presented a free online seminar for Hadley students and community called “Successful Business Ownership.”

“Hadley was one of the first resources introduced to me by the Veterans Administration after I went blind,” says Mr. Miyares. “To be recognized by the school shows me how far I have come in the blindness and business communities.”

Brenda Rice, Tennessee

“I am very grateful to Hadley for recognizing me with their Student of the Year Award,” says Brenda Rice, who was blinded by a car accident while she was in college. “I have always been an avid reader; however, I was not sure how I would learn to read braille. Hadley was an excellent resource for me and I am very thankful for all the support they offered.”

Arpit Jain, Indore, India

“Being blind has been both an emotional and physical trauma, one I was not sure how to cope with. Hadley’s courses have strengthened my resolve to be independent and given me a new perspective on life. I have new goals. This award is a milestone, a sense of recognition. It’s not only for me but for others who may also become blind late in life.”

For the past 50 years, The Hadley School for the Blind has acknowledged its highest achieving students. The school’s Student Awards honor those who inspire others through their hard work, dedication and spirit. We have presented awards to a total of 175 students since 1959.

We are proud to introduce our distinguished 2009 Student Award Winners.
The courses I have taken through Hadley have reinforced the concept that with perseverance, one can accomplish goals that may have seemed unattainable. That is probably the most valuable overall lesson I have learned from Hadley.”

“Hadley instructors act as mentors to promote lifelong learning and professionalism. They take the time to respond to my concerns, provide lesson feedback and answer questions. They spend extra time offering helpful tips even after I complete the courses. This goes above and beyond my expectations.”

“We are trying to involve our daughter in activities like swimming, horseback riding and music lessons, thanks to tips from Hadley courses. In spite of her visual impairment and cerebral palsy, our daughter is able to participate in age-appropriate activities. It is because Hadley has shown us that things are possible… it has made a big difference in our lives.”

“It is amazing how helpful the instructors at Hadley have been over the years. They are always just a phone call or email away. They have their students’ best interests at heart. The coursework is hard, but fun and very satisfying. Hadley has turned me into a lifelong student.”

“The scope of the school’s reach is astounding. I feel as if I go to school with the world.”

—Patricia Bulko, Hadley student award winner

Hadley–China

The Hadley School for the Blind celebrated the 20th anniversary of its school in Fuzhou, China last fall. Hadley-China offers tuition-free distance education courses to people who are blind throughout the country. The school serves more than 1,000 students each year and focuses on the teaching of English and English braille.

The ability to speak English is a coveted skill in China; it opens up employment opportunities, especially to blind individuals who have limited career choices.

Student representative Zeng Tian summed up the feelings of Hadley–China students in four words: hardship, happiness, improvement and gratefulness. “When we learn an English word, master a grammatical point or receive a certificate in English, our happiness cannot be measured in words.”

High School Graduation

Each June, Hadley’s high school graduates arrive in Winnetka to partake in commencement exercises. Graduation is a joyous occasion and an opportunity for students and their loved ones to meet Hadley instructors, staff and donors and to share their stories, accomplishments and future plans.

Five of this year’s 10 graduates attended the school’s eighth commencement exercise. To date, hundreds of students have supplemented their local public high school coursework with Hadley courses.

Though students have been graduating from Hadley’s High School Program since the 1940s, the school began hosting an official cap and gown ceremony in 2002. Ray George, one of the first Hadley Trustees to escort a graduate down the aisle to receive her diploma, recalls what a moving experience it was. “If you’ve never been to a Hadley graduation, I highly recommend it.

“As sighted individuals, we take our High School graduations for granted, but these students have to work so much harder to achieve theirs. Their families, who have supported them along the way, are so proud; there’s not a dry eye in the house.”

Hadley Collaborations

Hadley–Bookshare Collaboration a Success

In October 2007, Hadley partnered with Bookshare.org to provide our U.S. students with access to this unique online library free of charge. Bookshare offers nearly 50,000 books and 150 periodicals to individuals who are print disabled. The Hadley–Bookshare Library partnership has benefitted the school in several ways:

• Qualified Hadley students who are visually impaired receive free Bookshare membership. Over 100 students have enrolled in Bookshare through Hadley to date.

• The project generated new volunteer opportunities that helped grow the Bookshare collection and enabled the community to learn about Hadley.

• The school will earn a total of $20,000 in revenue through the Bookshare agreement. Upon its completion, in early 2010, Hadley and its volunteers will have contributed more than 300 books to this online library. The school plans to continue providing opportunities for volunteers to add to the library’s collection, but the focus will shift to recommended reading for our students.

• Bookshare could not have been possible without a generous contribution from Rick and Sandy Forsythe and Sandy’s leadership on the Hadley–Bookshare Subcommittee. With their support, we successfully launched the library and furthered our mission of lifelong learning.

Hadley–USU Courses Near Completion

Hadley and Utah State University (USU) have completed four courses for associate, bachelor’s or master’s degree credit: “Introduction to Blindness and Visual Impairment,” “The Human Eye and Visual System,” “Introduction to Braille” and “The Role of Paraeducators with Individuals Who are Blind or Visually Impaired.” “Introduction to Multiple Disabilities” and “Introduction to Low Vision” will be available in the spring.

Announced in January 2008, the partnership provides courses as part of USU’s SKI-HI Institute, a unit of the College of Education’s Department of Communicative Disorders and Deaf Education. Students in this program receive either a Certificate in Blindness or a USU degree in General Studies with a focus in blindness.

This one-of-a-kind program increases access to affordable distance education for teachers, teacher assistants, paraprofessionals and parents to help them obtain professional certification in working with students who are blind or visually impaired. It also enhances their knowledge and awareness of resources for children with disabilities.
Hadley Volunteers

In April, Hadley hosted its third annual volunteer recognition lunch, honoring those who regularly give of their time to assist staff with duties ranging from audio recording of courses to preparing mailings to transcribing and proofreading books for the Hadley–Bookshare Library.

We thank those who work tirelessly behind the scenes to help ensure Hadley’s ongoing success.
Hadley Young Visionaries
The Young Visionaries enjoyed another successful year spreading the word about Hadley and raising funds on behalf of the school. Led by co-chairs Ginny Hiltz and Matt Barden, the group hosted fund- and friend-raising events such as a “Whirlyball” outing and a “Glow Ball” golf challenge at the Winnetka Golf Club. The group looks forward to lending volunteer support and donating proceeds from social events to the school.

If you are in your 20s or 30s and are interested in supporting Hadley’s mission and educating peers about our school’s programs and services as a Young Visionary, please contact the school.

Hadley’s Ambassador Program
Ambassadors learn about the benefits of collaborating with Hadley to help their clients be successful at work and in daily life. Since its inception in 2003, the Ambassador Program has been a huge success—doubling the enrollment of Hadley students in Canada in less than two years.

This unique training experience facilitates outreach to those who can benefit from Hadley’s free distance education courses. It also enhances the expertise and services of professionals, resulting in a more cost effective and successful rehabilitation experience for their clients.
Governance by our Board of Trustees has proven vital to the success of the Hadley School. Trustee stewardship has extended the gift of education to blind individuals and their support networks throughout the world.

Hadley Giving Societies

For the past 89 years, The Hadley School for the Blind has depended upon and greatly appreciated the gifts of thousands of generous donors. Wishing to especially honor those who have made tremendous commitments, the school established cumulative giving societies and created a Donor Wall to recognize those society members. In addition, Hadley also wanted to acknowledge those who pledged to future giving, either through estate commitments or life income arrangements, and thus created the Clarence Boyd Jones Society.

All of these supporters and their gifts are extremely important to the school, because such major financial commitments both strengthen and sustain the school in its current operations and future planning—for which Hadley students are most grateful.
